About the Employability Award

Employability Award recipients actively engage in a range of professional and community-based activities, programs, and experiences in addition to their academic studies.

Recipients of the Award utilise reflective practice to evaluate their development and learning, and effectively communicate their potential.

Completion of the Award acknowledges the development of competencies, capabilities, and innovative mindsets that enable recipients to build meaningful networks, engage in lifelong learning, and flourish in unpredictable work environments.

The University of Queensland presents

Arnav Negi

With the

Employability Award

In recognition of the personal and professional development gained from their involvement in activities above and beyond their academic studies.

Completion of the Employability Award acknowledges the recipient's capacity to proactively identify and participate in development opportunities, engage in reflective practice, recognise the value of contributing to the wider community, and effectively communicate their potential.
